

NEW JERSEY GUARDIAN
129 WEST MARKET STREET
NEWARK, NEW JERSEY.

January 5, 1942

Mrs. Effie Manley
Crawford Street near High St.
Newark, N. J.

Dear Mrs. Manley:

I called at your home this afternoon and I am sorry you were out, as I wanted to speak with you in regards to the matter in which we were involved last night. Posey, as drunk as he was, went to bed at the Grand Hotel at 5:00 A.M. and was out and gone before 9; but I had quite a lengthy talk with him before I left, about 3:30, and he made me some promises of what he would do for you, providing.

I am sorry you elected to argue so strongly last night, after seeing his condition. I happened to know Posey very well, and when out in Pittsburg, we were always good friends. Of course this friendship existed for many years without one cintilla of misunderstanding, and I believe that he corroborated this last night in your presence.

Please get in touch with me as soon as you get this letter, and in the meantime, don't write to Posey until after we can confer, as I am definitely certain that I can depend on him to go the bat for you and get the thing done that you desire.

Very truly yours,

F. R. Clark
EDITOR and PUBLISHER

FRG:vh